TO THE WEST! TO THE WEST!

Before making your arrangements to follow the advice of the "thousands who have already gone," it would be well to consider what has been done to make the journey to your "Homes in the West" as pleasant and free from danger as human skill and foresight can accomplish.

By consolidation and construction, a road has been put into operation on the shortest possible line from Nashville, Tenn., to St.
Louis, "the future great City of the world."

This line, the
ST. LOUIS & SOUTHEASTERN RAIL-WAY.

has, during the past year, earned an enviable reputation by its smooth track, prompt time, easy connections, and the magnificence of its passenger equipment. Its trains are made up of new and commodious day cars, provided with the celebrated Miller complex and platform, and the Westinghouse air-brake.

It is positively the only line running
Pullman Palace Drawing-Room Sleeping Cars through without change from Nashville to St. Louis. No other line pretend to offer such advantages, either in distance, time, or equipment. Why, then, journey by circuitous routes? Do not be induced to purchase tickets to St. Louis or the West by any other line, remember that

The "St. Louis & Southeastern" is the shortest, cheapest, quickest, best and only line under one management from Nashville to St. Louis, and is from 60 to 200 miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, California, Texas, and all western points. It is also the "Chicago Shortest Line," via Evansville.

You can secure the cheapest rates for yourself and your movables on application, in person or by letter, to CHARLES McCABE, Southern Passenger Agent, near College Street Depot, Nashville, Tenn., or

WILMINGTON, N. C.

Thursday, September 25th, 1873.

THAT philosophy which demonstrates the non-existence of mind or matter is justly esteemed barren, even by those who teach it. No man pays any attention to a course of reasoning which proves that he does not live, for it is upon the problem of how to live most profitably to ourselves and our fellows, that our minds are employed. Nor is it of any avail to prove that we have been living for years under a government and laws which are the results of usurpations and fraud. The naked fact that not only in matters which the laws of our being compel us to regard, but in those cases where we were free agents in our choice, we have sanctioned and given efficacy to laws which originated wrongfully, relieves those laws of their tortious complexion. What Englishman would be willing to undo the acts of Henry VIII, and restore the church property wrenched by his hand from the disestablished monasteries? Would they repeat the acts of the Long Parliament or of Cromwell? They would as soon blot from English history the splendid achievements of Blake, as to nullify the laws and settlements of property under the laws of those two.

If it could be clearly shown that the people of North Carolina have for five years been living under no government, constitution, or law, then everything done under these laws, constitution and government is void. For example, there has been no lawful marriage solemnized in this State since the present constitution went into operation. No children of those "so-called" marriages are legitimate; no conveyances of property are binding; nor is there at present any protection for life and property, except such as the individual himself possesses!

Manifestly such a state of things does not exist. Yet it is what the editors of the Wilmington Journal imply in the wonderful letter which appeared in that paper on the 24th, over their joint signatures. Just here, we distinctly observe that the peculiar subject matter of the Journal's letter, the special tax bonds, we do not purpose to discuss. It is the general assertions and arguments which the editors use, and which, if true, would overturn our State and local governments, that we shall combat.

When we come to ascertain the results which ushered into life the Legislature of 1868-'69-'70, we cannot class it, as the Journal has done, as the bastard offspring of the carpet bagger and the negro. Let us look at the condition of the State before the reconstruction acts became a part of the law of the land. In 1865, open resistance to the arms of the National Government ceased. The rebellion had collapsed like a child's bubble pricked with a bayonet. Its leaders were escaping and attempting to escape to foreign countries, to evade the justice of their own. One-third of the population of the territory which included the insurrection had been slaves, just freed by the termination of a war which had for its origin the intention of binding the chains of slavery upon them and their descendants to the latest generation of time. The remaining two-thirds were hiding their diminished heads in an agony of shame and remorse for their past, and yet dread for a future which held out no light to their anxious eyes, was perhaps the superior terror which possessed them. President Johnson, in this anomalous condition of things, as commander-in-chief of the armies of the United States, assembled a convention. This convention was as unknown to the laws of the country as was the succeeding one of 1868. This convention, whose members were elected by the qualified voters of the State, submitted a constitution to the people of North Carolina for their consideration. This constitution, differing in no material point from the constitution of 1835, except in abolishing slavery, was rejected. A marked change had come over the people of North Carolina and the South. Those men who had a few months before, with protestation of loyalty and denunciations of secession and the leaders thereof, solicited with the most abject pertinacity the removal of the disabilities which the President had imposed on them, refused the boon which the mildness of the administration offered them. Those men who had been shining lights in every tabernacle of secession, whether set up at a cross road or at a capitol, now dangled at the heels of every old Union man in the State, praying for his influence with "one W. W. Holden," to endorse the application for pardon which they carried in their pockets, addressed to the President of the United States. What had brought about this mighty change? The leniency of the Government. Because no gibbets had been erected—because no blood had flowed—because Mercy had unbound the eyes of Justice, and shown the supplicants kneeling around—because a parental government had not sacrificed sinful children—those ungrateful sons again turned to rend the bosom of their mother. The United States permitted during 1866 the affairs of the late rebellious States to be administered by the late and present enemies of the government. More than seventy thousand citizens who had representation in the Congress elected by others, were denied the right of suffrage because they were black. This alone was not the measure of their wrongs. Whenever one of these citizens had acquired a horse or other property, white men, in the broad daylight, and upon public highways, robbed that citizen with impunity of his property, and very often took his life. This shocking outrage was followed by no punishment, and rarely did an investigation follow such accursed deeds.

No Republican government, no government save of force existed at that time in the South. It is no great hazard to say that had affairs continued the same in the South six months longer from the time the reconstruction acts went into operation, that the races would have been arrayed in deadly combat against each other. Then Congress took the matter in hand. That exclusive spirit of aristocracy which opposes the equality on which a Democratic form of government is founded, was broken down. The inherent and inalienable humanity of the negro was recognized, and the proscriptive spirit which had attempted the destruction of his manhood was eliminated in those acts which are called acts of reconstruction. From a confusion which was rapidly approaching an internecine war, they evolved order, law and justice. In those incomparable acts which restored the South to its relation to the General Government, justice was done to a long suffering race. What had been almost destroyed in four millions of human beings, by cruel wretches, by sealing of knowledge, by the stupidity of others, by the annihilation of the marriage tie—their universal manhood was asserted in that maxima charta—of the human race. In those acts which vindicated the supreme authority of a government which had forgiven, and still forgives, no confiscations of property enriched the authors or the executors of the law. Under the authority conferred by those acts, ten new governments went into operation, which have steadily been pressing onward in a prosperous career. Under those governments the hand of oppression has been in a great measure stayed, and those unprincipled men who have always been ready to abuse power committed to their charge, are now well nigh powerless. The negroes, who ten years ago scarcely dared hope the mighty day of their deliverance was near, or who despaired of freedom for themselves or their children, under constitutions and laws which arose from the acts of reconstruction, now are the political equals of the proudest oppressors that ever separated a mother and her child. The courts are always open for the administration of justice, and wherever a wrong exists, it is but to turn a leaf and the remedy is found.

These governments, we trust, will survive the attacks of all their enemies. Whether they are nourished in the bosom, whether they invade from beyond the seas, we place our trust in that Almighty Being who has heretofore upheld us. Nor will they be arrested in their progress by such efforts as have hitherto been directed against them. Their high destinies are not yet fulfilled; after their enemies shall have been forgotten, save those which belong to general history, they will "rear themselves amid regal ruin," as landmarks for the lovers of liberty, and as beacons for the friends of mankind.

We appeal with confidence to all men of North Carolina, whose judgment is not blinded by prejudice or some baser passion, to yield a hearty support to the constitution and laws of the State. To realize abstractions which would place us in a condition of anarchy, would be to grasp at a shadow and lose the substance of government. The madness of a few, we believe, will never shake the stability of this or any other firmly established institution. Still, every appearance of revolutionary strife, which has no just complaint to arouse it, should be met and rebuked by all who have any stake in such a contest. Inflammatory appeals of the nature of the effusion of the Journal's editors, are certainly out of place; at least until the people are called upon to act on the matter of the special tax bonds, or some other grievance which is present and tangible. Such firebrands thrown among them, will die before a spark is communicated. There is no need of such appeals, and they injure only those who make them. This people have too much sense to be ensnared again. They remember the oath of allegiance. They know the emptiness of a triumph of the old leaders of slavery, and the horrors of war too well to attempt to revolutionize this State government. And besides, there are more than a hundred thousand men in North Carolina who see in the constitution and the laws of the State the fulfilled hopes of martyrs, sages and patriots. They see those gracious efforts of philanthropy which have engaged the attention of the best and wisest of every generation of men realized; and they see political liberty, which heretofore has been but an abstract theory, become the common heritage of mankind.

We are happy to be in position to inform our friends and patrons that on Tuesday next, our new, spacious and elegantly fitted up store, will be opened with a neatly selected "FALL STOCK," in variety charming, and in extent unlimited in its every detail.

In addition to the separate branches of our former business, we have been fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. G. L. Johnson, of Fayetteville, to superintend the entire contract of a first class and we confidently invite our customers to give her their unprejudiced support and countenance.

DRESS MAKING AND LADIES' UNDERWEAR DEPARTMENT.
